

Air service still possible

Shedpole Brothers Aviation are not concerned about a recent Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce survey that said 63 per cent wouldn't use their proposed air service.

The Calgary-based company still hopes to get Canadian Transport Commission approval in mid or late December.

They are seeking approval to operate a scheduled air service connecting Calgary, Edmonton, Rocky Mountain House and Drayton Valley. Shedpole Brothers hope to link the west Central Alberta communities with morning and evening departures and arrival to both major centers. In that operation will be two days per week with a planned expansion to a daily basis should the service be well received.

The study, carried out by the Chamber, showed that 63 per cent of the oil and construction related companies said they wouldn't use the service. Their response was either they had their own aircraft or they didn't need the service. Another 30 per cent said they would use the air service on a daily, weekly, monthly basis.

Both the Rocky Mountain House Chamber of Commerce and town council have sent letters of support to the Canadian Transport Commission while nothing has been received from Drayton Valley.

Enumeration ends

With the exception of the dog problem, enumeration in the Drayton Valley constituency went well.

The two-week enumeration ended Monday.

Marlene Samia, returning officer in the Drayton Valley electoral division, says some of her people didn't enter a yard because of guard dogs.

For those people, and others who may have been missed, a three-day session to get your name on the provincial voters list will be held Oct. 17-19 at the Provincial Building in Drayton Valley. People who were missed during the recent two-week enumeration are urged to come in and register.

Grande Prairie get senior games

The 1986 Alberta Senior Games have been awarded to Grande Prairie the Alberta Sport Council (ASC) announced last week.

Council will attend

Members of Drayton Valley town council will be available to answer questions at tonight's (Wednesday) Chamber of Commerce meeting.

The supper meeting gets underway at 6:30 p.m. at the Westwinds.

According to Chamber president Chad Nichols, Mayor Bob Mayhew asked for the time to speak. "We had them out a couple of years ago and it was very good. They brought the Chamber membership up to date on many of the projects they were working on," Nichols stated.

Tickets are available from Chamber board members, NRS Nichols Realty or at the door.

A Calgarian, Hans Kivimä, won the $25,000 award of merit at the same banquet in Edmonton last Thursday. Kivimä, an engineer, developed the flat drilling platform for pieces of sea ice.

Shimbashi was recognized for his work in reducing chronic pain. The local dentist had been nominated by Dr. Walter Buck, an Edmonton dentist and MLA with the Representative party, and Dr. John Sherman, a Lethbridge dentist.

The games were originally planned for Drayton Valley, but the town bowed out of hosting the three-day affair because of financial and facility problems.

The "tentative" dates for the games are August 7, 8 and 9 according to Max Orbo, executive director of the ASC.

After Drayton Valley backed out of hosting the games, the ASC reviewed the bids of Camrose, Medicine Hat, Drumheller and Grande Prairie. The games had been hosted by Camrose on two previous occasions.

Grande Prairie received the nod because they "had a very solid bid," Gibb said.

"They looked very good," Gibb added, pointing out that the facilities were already in place. "They are very rich in facilities," Gibb explained, adding the city of Grande Prairie will be making a member of their recreation staff the general manager of the games.

The budget for the games in Grande Prairie will be around $130,000, according to Gibb.

Brownies numbers are down from last year

Where have all the Brownies gone?

That's a question Darlene Van Ember, district commissioner for Girl Guides in Drayton Valley would like to know.

When registrations were held last month only 54 girls signed up for Brownies compared to 70 last season. Sixteen girls turned out for Guides and another six for Pathfinders, and those totals are about the same as last year.

"It's unbelievable to everyone," Van Ember says. "I spent half the summer getting leaders, now we don't have the kids," she added.

The leaders plan to meet shortly to discuss their course of action with a small registration.

Busy summer for Moffitt

It's been a busy summer for Drayton Valley Welcome Wagon hostess Connie Moffitt.

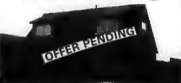

During the months of July and August Moffitt visited 18 new residents. She has another six to see plus a long list of new teachers.

"Most of the people I've seen were transfers or connected with the oil field," Moffitt stated.

Moffitt, who has been with Welcome Wagon for almost two years, says she enjoys meeting and greeting new people to the area.

Joins paper

Ray Lainebury has joined the editorial staff of The Western Review. Lainebury worked at the paper for five months earlier in the year as part of the work experience program.

He was "born and raised" in Drayton Valley and his parents farm near Violet Grove. The 16-year-old just graduated from Frank Madlock High School and has an older brother and sister.

He will be working in the darkroom at the paper along with doing layout and news reporting. Lainebury said he was initially "interested in the photo aspect" of the newspaper.

He hopes to further his education in the journalism field in the "next couple of years." Lainebury said he is considering the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology in Calgary to continue his education.

Glorifying God

Members of local congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses travelled to Whitecourt last week to attend a two-day circuit assembly arranged by the Watch Tower Society.

J. Burton, an elder from the Drayton Valley congregation, reports that the theme of the seminar was "Doing Our Part in Glorifying God". Principle speaker at the assembly was T.L. Moore, district representative of the Watch Tower Society. The subject of his speech was "Global Peace, From What Source?"

More than 158 delegates attended the assembly from nine congregations in Alberta Circuit 5B.

Equipment coming

If the weatherman cooperates the new playground equipment could be installed in the old swimming pool tank this week.

Recreation director Calvin Bensfield reports that weeping tile has been installed that will hopefully drain off all the water. Exact costs of the weeping tile isn't known at this time as the material came out of stock. Only the main hours will be tabulated against the town's budget.

Parlo Playgrounds of Bowden only needs two days to install the equipment.

No apartments

In response to a petition from area home owners, council will rescind the land in Aspen View so no apartments can be developed.

In 1979 the area was zoned for apartment complexes.

A public hearing on the rezoning will be held on Oct. 9 at 7 p.m. in the town office.

Council gave first reading to the bylaw which "worked out to the benefit of all parties," according to Councillor Howard Olsen.

Opinions

New landfill site could be campground

My biggest fears of going to the 'dump' have been erased.

Concerns over being stranded or having a flat tire are a thing of the past at the Drayton Valley landfill site and its connecting transfer stations.

Actually, there's no comparison between the old open pit dumps that we've used for years and the new setup.

The renovated Drayton Valley site and the four transfer stations located at Easyford, Rocky Rapids, Violet Grove and Buck Creek feature paved roads, shrubs, trees and the entire areas are fenced.

Add to that, plans to convert part of the Drayton Valley site into a campground.

Part of the new image users can get used to was the open house held Monday at the Drayton Valley sanitary landfill. We've heard of a lot of open houses, but it's a first for a dump.

The Town of Drayton Valley, the County of Parkland and the County of Leduc are to be commended for leading the way toward improved landfill sites. What is happening here is already being investigated by other communities with garbage problems.

That's progress

Detours, potholes, sidewalk construction and oily streets have been a part of Drayton Valley's landscape in past weeks.

And, while many have cursed under their breath about the inconvenience, they must realize it's all part of progress.

The town is to be commended for all the work they have undertaken this summer.

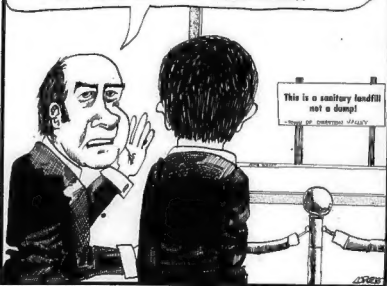

The installation of water and sewer and the prospects of Fogarty Ridge being annexed into the town, is the main reason for all the potholes and detours on 50th Avenue. Sidewalks have been extended into many residential areas where they were needed, and some of the uneven walks downtown have been ripped out and replaced.

The matter of the oily streets is unfortunate. But the contractors' hands have been tied, with the bad weather and all.

A lot of the coffee shop talk has been about vehicles slipping and sliding on the oil. But, from what we've seen, most of this didn't need to happen, if the motorist would obey the signed speed limits.

If we are to grow, things like detours, potholes and oily streets are things we will have to learn to live with.

This is really a classy dump — even the flies have to wear suits!

Great time of the year for sports fans

If you're a sports fan, this is a great time of the year.

The baseball pennant races are going down to the wire, the CFL is nearing the three-quarter pole and the hockey season has arrived.

The Toronto Blue Jays appear headed for the American League east pennant while California and Kansas City battle it out in the west, in the National League the Dodgers have what appears to be a comfortable lead in the west while St. Louis and New York will likely go down to the wire in the east.

There was a time, a couple of weeks ago, when I thought my Yankees would overhaul the Jays, but that doesn't appear likely. I'll go with Kansas City over California in the west with Toronto taking the AL berth in the World Series.

Editor's Notes

Because I've always liked Gary Carter, I'll go with the Mets over the Cardinals. And, it would be nice if the Dodgers would slip and let Pete Rose and the Cincinnati Reds in the NL playoffs.

My World Series long shots are the Mets. If they don't get in, watch for the Cardinals.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers should win the Grey Cup over Montreal.

The B.C. Lions and Edmonton should make the western playoffs while Hamilton and Ottawa will likely finish behind Montreal.

If the CFL is too boring, you can always catch the NFL.

Can the Oilers make it three Stanley Cups? That question is already being asked. Watch for Philadelphia or Washington to give Wayne Gretzky and Company a run for another ring.

And, can Christmas be that far away as the Elks Club are circulating available dates for Christmas parties?

What others are saying

The picture, highlighted by newspapers and television cameras, burned its way into collective guilt in the way that a picture of a corporation going bust could never do.

There it was: evicted hog farmer Sonny Engel walking away from his farm and his home, an RCMP constable at his side. Only the most callous could fail to sympathize.

Engel's problems began four years ago, when the Alberta Agricultural Development Corporation agreed to lend him $200,000 to buy 160 acres of land to start a hog operation. But the AADC withheld $18,000 after a local lumber yard put a lien on the property. The shortage left Engel with a hog barn half-built. Without the cash, the operation was unable to proceed.

A tragedy, yes. But just as some businesses fail, so is it only reasonable to expect that some farmers won't make it.

Dave Werlin, president of the Alberta Federation of Labor, says Engel is the victim of "government policy and government folly." Perhaps he's right. Maybe Engel never should have received the loan.

Farm bankruptcies are often more tragic than business failures because farmers not only lose their sources of income, they also lose their homes.

That's why farm loan agencies have an even greater responsibility than other lenders to screen applicants, to intervene early when there are problems, to make extension services available and to be reasonable in the amount of time given to farmers in trouble.

In Engel's case, there is no indication that such procedures were not followed. Indeed, he was given almost three years, rent-free, to sort out his situation — more time than would be given most small-businessmen.

Should a shortfall of $18,000 on a $200,000 loan have made the difference between success and failure? Surely Engel must take a large measure of responsibility for his plight.

This is not to downplay the problems faced by farmers. As of Aug. 31, 1985, there were 882 direct farm loans in arrears to the AADC by more than one year.

But that statistic must be put in perspective. Those loans represent only 2.6 of the corporation's total portfolio. More than 97 per cent of its loans are in good standing.

A recent federal government report predicts that Canadian farmers' net income will dip by 15.3 per cent in 1985. More farm bankruptcies can be expected in Alberta.

There are times when the kindest word a banker can say is "No."

Ceasars bow out in semi's

Spruce Grove wins second soccer title

By Frank Ryan

For the second straight year Spruce Grove has won the Central Alberta Rural Towns Soccer League playoff title.

Two goals in the final 10 minutes gave Spruce Grove a 2-1 decision over Whitecourt, who were forced to play most of the final without two of their regulars, Matt Gibson and Julian Annicchiarini, who were sidelined with injuries in the first half, although Annicchiarini did see limited action in the second half.

Spruce Grove made it into the Sunday afternoon final with a 2-0 win over Edson while Whitecourt upset host Drayton Valley Ceasars 4-2 in a shootout.

In opening round action Saturday, Andy Kelly scored twice as Ceasars downed the Sundance Strikers 7-1. Whitecourt edged Parkland 2-1, Edson blanked Mayerthorpe 5-0 and Spruce Grove shut out Hinton 5-0. In the 'B' side play the Strikers needed two penalty rounds to down Parkland 1-0 while Hinton shutout Mayerthorpe 2-0. In the 'B' final, Hinton defeated the Strikers 1-0 after two rounds of penalty shoot.

Host Ceasars and Whitecourt battled through 75 minutes of scoreless play at Drayton Valley's West Valley Park before the 'A' semi-final was decided in a shootout. The first four shooters for Whitecourt—Andres Becker, Matt Gibson, Julian Annicchiarini and Bernard Becker all scored, while Dave Jackson and Rod Reeler replied for Ceasars. Andy Kelly, the first Ceasar to shoot, had the ball go off the side of his foot and it missed the net, while Blake Little's shot also missed the Whitecourt net.

At the league awards banquet Saturday night at the Royal Canadian Legion, Wilf Wripely of Spruce Grove and Annicchiarini split the most valuable player award. Mike Heron of Spruce Grove, with 24 goals in 14 league games, was named top scorer. Annicchiarini was admitted into the league's 50-goal club while Heron, Rod Reeler and Peter Kelepouris of Drayton Valley made it into the 50-goal club.

Ceasars also took the opportunity at the banquet to hand out their awards. Andy Kelly was named best offensive player, Blake Little captured the best defensive player award, Nigel Buckland won the rookie award, Clarence Tsai was selected as the most improved and goaltender Simon Kelly won his third straight most valuable player award.

Goaltender Kelly, who is also league president, was fairly satisfied with the final turn of events. The league banquet may have lost money as many of the Spruce Grove players didn't show after saying they would.

Stopping the ball was what these two players had in mind, but they both were a little late in their attempt.

Junior Blades practice Friday

The Drayton Valley Blades return to the ice Friday night.

The junior 'B' club, members of the five-team Central Alberta League will hold player registration and their first practice this Friday evening from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the arena. All junior age players are welcome. Players are to bring their own equipment.

Simon Kelly, who handled the club through their final seven league games last year returns as head coach. Assisting him on a co-coach basis will be Morris Seiferling. The two have played men's recreation hockey together for the past six winters.

Kelly is expecting about 13 players back from last year's club. Several midgeets are also expected to turn out, along with several new players who are working in town.

The Blades will play in a league with the Rocky Mountain House Renegades, Rimley Weststars, Barrhead Elks and Hinton Cardinals.

Volleyball tourney

The volleyballs will be flying at Frank Madlock High School this weekend.

The school will be hosting a 28 team tournament that gets underway Friday at 4:30 p.m.

The first game will see the hometown Amazons play against Jasper High School.

The games will continue Friday and Saturday with the finals being played at about 8 p.m. on Saturday.

The tournament is split into 14 girls and 14 boys teams from around central Alberta.

BMX track opens

Locals soar over jumps

Thirty bikers lined up for the Drayton Valley Kinmen's first BMX races last Sunday.

It was the first test for the Kinmen track located at West Valley Park.

Aside from four minor spills, all the contestants enjoyed the opportunity to match their riding skills against others.

Craig Abendroth took first place in the eight and nine-year-old class with Brendan Fitzgerald and Eric Schneider following.

Ed Ewert captured top spot in the 10 and 11-year-old class followed by Kevin Carefoot and Barney Reich.

First place in the 12-year-old class went to David Anderson followed by Craig Warren and Chad Barringer.

Andre Lacroix took first in the 13-year-old group followed by Kevin Yig and Travis Harrison.

In the very competitive 14 and over race, Mike Miller rounded the three-corner, live-bump course first. He was followed by Greg Pankiewicz and Fred Brown.

Yogi Abendroth, who put a lot of work into the new BMX track, won the Kinmen riding event.

Abendroth says the Kinmen have some future plans for the site, which including fencing to keep four-wheel drive vehicles out and to build a building that could be used for storage and as an announcer's stand. The Kinmen will also attempt to organize a BMX club next season.

BMX racing got a big shot-in-the-arm last weekend when a group of trick riders from Red Deer performed at the races and also at the Derick Mall on Saturday.

The BMX races last Sunday attracted many racers.

Amazons defeated

The Frank Maddock High School Amazons came up just short in weekend volleyball action. The senior girls team travelled in Grand MacEwan College in Edmonton to take part in a 24 team tournament but lost out in the quarter-finals.

After advancing to the quarter-finals with a seven win three loss record the Amazons met the Jasper Place Composite team from Edmonton.

In the first game they lost 15-10 but came back to edge the Jasper Place squad 18-14 in the second game before losing the third 15-10.

The team played very well, said coach Carl Passy.

The senior boys team also played in a tournament on the weekend in Barrhead. They split their games with six wins and six losses but didn't qualify for the playoffs.

Both teams will see action this weekend in a 28 team tournament being hosted at Frank Maddock High School.

Recreation hockey filling

Six teams will be facing off in the Drayton Valley men's recreation hockey league this winter.

The league will run with the same number of teams as last year but could have an abundance of players.

According to Gil Labonte, the league for the first time may have to turn players away. Action will begin once the ice is in and should run until the end of March.

The Green Arrows have won the league the last two years and will be back to defend their title.

Consider: most of the 30 varieties High Arctic carries are complete, pan ready and easy to prepare and are priced between $1.00 to $1.99 per pound. Many of these are high protein and limited availability. It only takes a 1/2 ounce of fish per serving, or approximately 1/2 lb to $1.26 per serving compared to 2-3 ounces of other meat products which can cost from $1.50 to $1.00 per serving. So, next time you're in the market, pick up some High Arctic. In the way, you can even stretch your dollar further by preparing mouthwatering seafood chowder, elegant appetizers, savory soups, refreshing main dish salads or delicious family style casseroles or surprising party dishes. Just use High Arctic's most friendly and helpful staff for a money saving recipe book and venture into a new gourmet experience.

Council News

Mular Western Industries is planning to spend $4 million to add a third line to its Whitecourt sawmill to process small timber. The highly-automated line will provide about a dozen jobs.

RCMP at Whitecourt are investigating a smuggling, following the theft of $30 from a 76-year-old man who was walking home from bingo.

The Fox Creek Chamber of Commerce has called a meeting for Oct. 9 at which time they hope to get an active club going. If not enough interest is shown, all attempts will be dropped.

Whitecourt's controversial proposed car control bylaw is dead. Slain in part by a 642-signature petition presented to council.

Charged with obstruction

Engel appearance set for October

Sonny Engel will appear in provincial court in Drayton Valley on October 24.

The 50-year-old farmer was charged with obstruction of a peace officer after he allegedly refused to leave his farm about 12 miles north of Drayton Valley.

Engel was arrested by RCMP and spent a night in jail after the confrontation last week.

Engel's problems started when the Alberta Agriculture Development Corporation (AADC) foreclosed on his farm because he couldn't make payments on a $200,000 loan.

Engel had borrowed the money to build a 4,700-square foot hog barn but the AADC started foreclosure proceedings six months after the 1981 loan.

Engel lived on the farm rent-free since the AADC took over the title to the 160-acre farm in 1982. Engel's hog barn stands unfinished and "has never seen a hog," he said.

Engel was released on a promise to appear notice and was ordered to appear in court in October to face the obstruction charge.

D.V. Highlights

By Edith Deby

Correction: Jim and Jean Beckett celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary recently.

We take this opportunity to express sympathy to the family of Betty Christensen who died on Sept. 18. She had been a resident for many years.

Roman and Dorothy Vowk are leaving to make their home in Calgary. Roman came to Exford as a youth and has farmed there all his adult years.

For the past two years he has been president of the Historical Society and I know I speak for all members when I say he will be sadly missed.

Winnie Hammerlind leaves Oct. 4 for Frankfurt, Germany. She will be accompanied by her son, Glen, who is presently living in Calgary. Winnie won the flight in a competition. They will rent a car during their two-week stay and hope to see as much as possible of western Europe.

Frances Edmunds loved much of the British Isles and continental Europe this summer with her daughters, Beth and Janet. It was a privilege to hear of her travels and see her photos of the beautiful landscapes, people and buildings.

AOC
FINANCING ALBERTA BUSINESS
The Alberta Opportunity Company provides financial and counselling assistance to small business enterprises.
The Porcelain Connection
Have you ever noticed the spool-shaped porcelain insulators on power lines? Some of those, along with transformer bushings, are manufactured by Alberta's Independent Porcelain Co. Ltd.
Eight years after the Medicine Hat company was opened, owner Frank Woiel approached conventional lenders to finance a working capital loan. Denied the assistance Frank turned to AOC.
AOC believed that the company, which had already expanded its plant, had a solid future. They provided the necessary financial backing.
Today, more than ten years later, Independent Porcelain Co.'s staff of 50 Albertans manufacture over 500,000 units annually. Both Canadian and American markets have been successfully penetrated, despite the strong competition and high transportation costs.
If you have a sound business idea, but are unable to obtain financing through regular sources, call or visit your nearest AOC office and ask for our brochure, Financing Alberta Business.

There will be a community bake sale at the Buck Lake curling club by Oct. 5. All donations will be appreciated. Proceeds will be divided

Fire Prevention Week October 6-12

Well-rehearsed plan is family's best fire defense

No one expects a fire to happen in their home, especially when all precautions have been taken. But despite the precautions, fires in the home occur, and when they do, your family's best defense is a well-rehearsed plan to get out of the home quickly and safely.

- Draw a floor plan of your home. Include all possible exits. Explain this plan to visitors and babysitters and ensure they understand your home evacuation plan.

- Locate all exits from each bedroom. Children should know that breaking through a window or door is an acceptable method of escape. For easier exit from upstairs windows, obtain a rope or metal escape ladder.

- Include outdoor features in the floor plan. A roof, balcony, garage or tree may assist in escape.
- Designate a meeting place outside the home. Include it in the floor plan and explain the importance of knowing that each family member is safe.

- Locate a neighbor's house to be used for contacting the fire department. Include the information in the floor plan along with the fire department's phone number. Tape the number to your telephone.

- Review the entire plan with all occupants of the household. Your children should practice repeating the following information: the fire department phone number, your family surname, your street address and, where necessary, the name of the town.

- Review the entire plan with a fire department official. He or she may be able to provide helpful input.

- Conduct a fire drill at least once every six months. The drill should be realistic. Vary it by calling out different hazards and different fire sources. Do not warn the family of the drill.

Remember to sleep with doors closed since this provides a barrier between you and the smoke. If a fire occurs. If you awaken to smoke or the sound of a smoke alarm, feel doors before opening them and if they are hot they should not be opened. If they are cool, open them slowly to avoid a rush of air that could feed the blaze. Slam the door shut and use another exit if heat and smoke enter the room. If possible, close doors behind you while escaping.

If a hallway or smoke-filled area is your only means of escape, you will have to crawl in safety holding a cloth over your nose and mouth. The safest zone for breathing in a fire is approximately 20 centimetres (12 inches) from the floor.

Do not waste time getting dressed or collecting valuables and do not return to a fire. Let firefighters handle the blaze.

An alert family practices another escape.

Tips for sitters

Babysitters are responsible for the safety of the children with whom they are sitting.

If a babysitter sees fire or smells smoke, he or she should get the children out of the house by the quickest, safest route.

To be prepared to save the lives of the children for whom they are responsible, babysitters should:

- Be familiar with the house in which they are working. They should know all potential escape routes from the house, including windows and patio doors.

- Plan at least two ways to escape from every room in the house. These escape routes should be practiced to ensure that the babysitter can actually get the children out.

- Feel the door before opening in the event of a fire. If the door is hot, the babysitter and children should find another way out.

- Crawl low in smoke. The best air for escape is near the floor at knee level.

- Phone the fire department from a neighbor's house after the children are safe.

- Know the address of the house in which they are babysitting. They will help the fire department find the house more quickly.

Hints for reducing fires

There are a number of ways to reduce the incidence of residential fires in Alberta. These are simple tips, but if they were followed more closely, the number of injuries and deaths, as well as the amount of residential property damage in Alberta, would be drastically reduced.

Flash them out

Ashttrays should not be emptied into garbage cans. Instead, ashtray contents should be flushed down the toilet. Containers may also be emptied into fireplaces and metal containers, provided the metal containers are stored away from flammables.

Fire isn't child's play

Matches and lighters should be kept out of the reach of children.

Watch your problem!

When replacing burnt out bulbs in your home, only use a bulb for which the lamp was rated. (For example, don't use a 100 watt bulb for a lamp that was designed to accommodate a 60 watt bulb.)

Training's not a game!

Gasoline is a fuel and is not meant for clean use. Only use an approved, non-flammable cleaning fluid to remove oil from mechanical parts and clothing.

Storing flammables

Gasoline and other flammables should be stored in tight metal containers. Don't use flammable liquids near heat, a pilot light or while smoking.

Stove storage

Don't store things over the stove. Catches catch fire as people reach over hot elements. And remember to turn pot handles toward the centre of the stove so children can't pull them down.

Smoking

Use large ashtrays and keep plenty of them around. Before you go to bed, look under cushions for burning cigarettes.

Fireplace safety

Use a metal fireplace screen. Have the chimney checked and cleaned regularly.

Rubbish

Sort and remove rubbish from basement, garage and storage rooms. Don't store things near the furnace or heater.

Check the label

All electrical appliances and tools should have a testing agency label. Have appliances repaired immediately if they aren't working properly.

Gremm keeps busy at bank and in the community

By Lorne Christensen

Ken Gremm really likes Drayton Valley. "I really like small towns," says the manager of the Treasury Branch.

For Gremm the Drayton Valley bank is number 10 on a list that has taken him all over Alberta with the Treasury Branch. "This is the longest I worked in a town since I started with them," Gremm says.

He began working for the bank back in February of 1960 and since then has been manager at four different banks.

"We will be moving, but when it's up to head of fire," says Gremm of his future in Drayton Valley. Gremm likes the "people contact" he can have in the local branch.

People are much more free in a small town, more involved," he explains.

Gremm himself is involved extensively with the local Lions club. He was chairman of the last Evergreen Rodeo and is currently working on marketing the Drayton Valley game.

As rodeo chairman he spent many days organizing the June event.

It's pretty hectic, the whole Lions club works very hard for a month prior to the rodeo. He added that it takes the club about six to eight months to prepare for the annual event.

Ken Gremm at his desk overlooking the bank.

In addition to working so closely with the rodeo Gremm is also heading up the sales of the monopoly-type Drayton Valley game.

It's for sale at various retail outlets throughout Drayton Valley.

Gremm says there has been a "very good response since it came out" in the spring of 1984. The club purchased 500 of the games and approximately 100 are still left to sell.

Gremm is also working with the Lions club in raising funds for the blind. He is chairman of the committee that will start a drive for local funds in October.

Added on to his work with the Lions club, Gremm is also kept busy with his daytime job at the bank.

The Drayton Valley Treasury Branch is one of the largest rural branches in Alberta and covers from Soba Beach down to Alder Flats and west, according to Gremm.

He doesn't just put in banking hours from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Gremm says his "hours are a little longer" and include numerous evenings and weekends.

"We have some very good programs for the farming industry," Gremm explains.

The local branch employs 29 people and Gremm has been manager since August of 1980. Gremm and his wife Delores have four children ranging in age from nine to 20.

He calls Drayton Valley his home base but admits that he will be moving on.

"I could possibly see a move next year or the year after," he adds.

ENERGY UPDATE

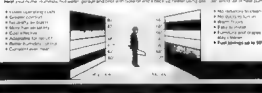

The World's Most Comfortable Heating System

MODERN LOW-TEMPERATURE FLOOR HEAT BY

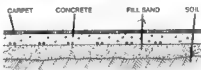

Solarroll

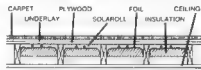

Heat and hot water is produced by solar collectors and pumped into the Solarroll heat tubes. The heat is transferred to the floor by conduction and convection. The floor is then heated and the heat is transferred to the room by conduction and convection.

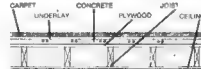

SOLARROLL IN CONCRETE SLAB

SOLARROLL HEAT TUBES IN FLOOR JOIST

SOLARROLL IN FIREPROOFING ON WOOD FLOOR

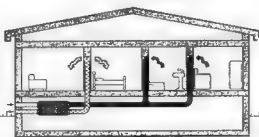

Radiant tube may be placed in three ways in concrete slabs: in between joist and on top of the plywood sub floor with lightweight concrete over the tubes. The tube space is determined by the heat loss of the building.

As a general rule the required water temperature to heat a home reasonably well built would be between 90° and 120° F. This maintains warm floors without discomfort and a constant distribution of warmth.

This warm can easily be heated by solar or a good portion of the year with a back up system of a gas, wood, oil or electric boiler.

A Revolutionary Exchanger

DESCRIPTION

FAN EXCHANGER is a unique air energy recovery fan affording sun, rain or exhaust of room air supply of outside air, humidity, coolness and energy transfer from exhaust air to supply air.

This can simply be done with an exhaust fan and a fresh air supply. However, as you are exchanging stale humid air and replacing it with fresh air, you incur a considerable expense to heat the incoming fresh air.

This situation created the need for a device to replace the air without wasting all the heat, thus the AIR TO AIR HEAT EXCHANGER. This device transfers most of the heat from the exhaust air to preheat the incoming air thus preventing an air exchange without a loss of energy.

Most of the heat exchangers on the market are approximately 80% efficient. This means that they transfer about 80% of the heat so the incoming air temperature will only be 20° lower than the exhaust air temperature.

SIMPLE NEW HEATING SYSTEM REDUCES YEAR ROUND HEATING COSTS FOR GREENHOUSES

A conventional greenhouse heating system, energy is used to heat the air which in turn warms the foliage and maintains most temperature for proper nutrient uptake.

The heating system is typically located above the plant floor. As a result warmth must travel down, against natural convection currents, to heat the foliage and penetrate the soil to heat roots. This means that higher temperatures are maintained above the crop than are needed for proper plant growth.

GRQ MAT changes this fundamental concept and by earth the plants. The heating system is typically located below the plant floor. The roots are warmed directly and warmth rises from the floor is supported by the foliage creating a "Hot Core" around the plant. Energy conservation steps taken: less use of the temperature system reduces heat loss from a greenhouse.

The low energy glass floor heat exchanger also for shops, factories, warehouses etc. The heat is always low where required instead of at ceiling height.

This system can only be installed by equal to three men who have the proper training.

SOLAROLL

FUEL SAVINGS UP TO 90%

Solar energy specialist

Harnessing the sun's power is a step toward saving

Our biggest source of energy remains untapped, but things are changing.

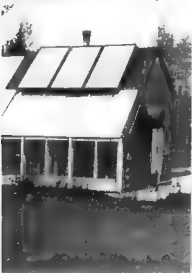

The use of solar power is beginning to catch on even more with increased heating costs, according to Horst Boehm.

Boehm, owner of H & B Plumbing in Drayton Valley, is a solar energy specialist.

He has travelled to various conventions on solar power across Canada and is one of the biggest outlets for solar equipment in Alberta.

Boehm was at the annual 85 convention in Montreal last June and says there are several new advances in solar technology.

He pointed out the photovoltaic as one of the biggest advances.

The solar collectors on top of the greenhouse heat the building all year around.

Each photovoltaic can run a 60 watt bulb and their total strength depends on the size.

Every factory has a different system, Boehm says about the photovoltaic.

New photovoltaics are coming out that don't need any sunshine, he added.

The new ones can collect the solar power through the clouds and therefore don't need sunshine to be effective.

Boehm stands beside the cucumber plants in his greenhouse.

Horst Boehm examines his large crop of tomatoes in his solar heated greenhouse. He harvests about 15 pounds of tomatoes off each of his 30 plants during the year.

But these new cells are still quite expensive according to Boehm.

One of the problems that is limiting extensive use of solar energy in Canada is the storage capacity for the power. The storage batteries available can store the power for about two weeks but as Boehm points out, prolonged cold periods during the winter make this system ineffective.

It's still in the development stage, Boehm adds, explaining in eastern Canada they are doing quite a bit with solar power but it's coming slowly in Alberta.

In our area we can't be 100 per cent solar, the winter is too long, he pointed out.

Boehm uses solar power on his own house, in West Hawk Estates, and so heats a greenhouse year round.

But he also has a jet stream wood boiler to supply heat and if he's too lazy and the sun doesn't shine then a gas furnace automatically kicks in.

In his greenhouse the sun heats up the gravel during the day and then at night the heat is released. He also has a furnace as insurance.

The furnace is there in case we don't get any sunshine for a few days, Boehm explains.

About 18 houses in Drayton Valley are presently using solar power to heat their water, Boehm adds. He also explained that the use of solar power to heat water can reduce the cost up to 75 per cent per year. Although the initial cost of installing the solar collectors and other equipment is high, the long term saving are substantial.

The cost depends entirely on the type of house and how extensive the system wanted.

Everybody has a different idea and a different situation.

But Boehm, who is a member of the Canadian Solar Society, says he can handle "any request" for solar equipment or questions about solar power.

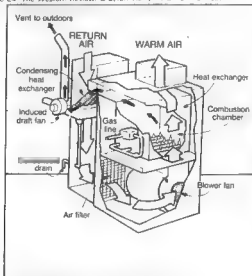

He has been to six different solar courses, including one in Germany and is considered an expert in the field.

I try to go every two years and it gives me a five year headstart before the others find out, he adds.

He has been involved with solar energy for about 12 years and says he likes to share his knowledge about the field with others.

Every year about eight to 10 seminars come to me, he says, adding they want to make more information for class projects.

It works out really good with the plumbing and heating side, I have both the knowledge and the material, Boehm points out.

HIGH-EFFICIENCY GAS FURNACE

Wide range

Equipment on market improved

If you are considering installing gas heating equipment, you will find a wide range of improved-efficiency furnaces on the market.

These appliances achieve their high efficiency by reducing the loss of warm house air up the chimney and extracting more heat from the combustion products.

Like any other combustion system, a gas-burning appliance must be vented to remove combustion products. Basic "atmospheric" gas furnaces use a conventional chimney and a draft hood. As a result, a large quantity of heated room air leaves the house, both when the furnace is on and when it is off.

The important differences between conventional systems and the more efficient appliances are: no draft hood, no chimney, electric ignition instead of a continuously burning pilot light, induced draft fan, and a highly efficient heat exchanger in the most efficient furnaces.

Although high-efficiency gas furnaces cost more to purchase than conventional systems, they are very energy efficient, whether in the coldest stretch of winter or in spring and fall when the heating system is used irregularly. Before buying, it is important to weigh the immediate costs against the future benefit of lower heating bills.

Two types of gas furnaces are particularly energy efficient — the induced draft furnace and the condensing flue-gas furnace.

The induced draft furnace is a noncondensing furnace with a range of 75 to 80 per cent steady-state efficiency and a range of 70 to 80 per cent seasonal efficiency.

Combustion air is supplied by a fan and there is no need for either a chimney or a draft hood. Combustion products are vented through the basement walls much like the air from a clothes dryer. The system uses spark ignition rather than a pilot light, saving more fuel. Although it is moderately high in price compared with conventional equipment, it should reduce heating costs by 15 to 25 per cent.

The condensing flue-gas furnace is substantially more expensive than a conventional atmospheric furnace, but it may reduce annual fuel costs by more than a third. Also, the chimney, draft hood and pilot light are eliminated with this furnace.

Combustion air is supplied by a fan, and two heat exchangers extract heat from the combustion products. The heat exchanger is the key to this furnace's performance. Combustion gases are cooled so much that mildly acidic water condenses out. By the time these gases leave the furnace, their temperature has dropped to about 40°C, as opposed to 150°C in a conventional furnace.

Amana

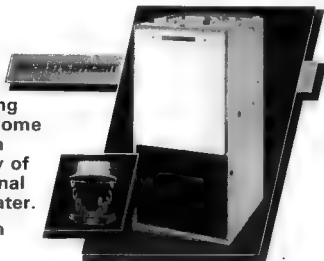

HTM Plus

A complete, energy saving system that heats your home efficiently and provides a virtually unlimited supply of hot water with the optional high efficiency water heater.

Heat'n Hot Water System

The two biggest energy users in your home are the furnace and the water heater. Amana introduces a system that can save money on both.

The most efficient Gas Furnace in the world!

Unprecedented Heating Efficiency

If your present gas furnace is over five years old, it is probably in the range of 55 to 60% efficient, compared to the Pulse's 91 to 96%*. This difference can mean drastic reductions in your monthly heating bills - enough to justify replacing your present unit today, even if it still operates. The Pulse furnace is that efficient. Even if your system is a newer "high efficiency" model, you can still save big with the Lennox Pulse.

Drafty door affects costs

Drafty doors are affecting the comfort of your home? Doors that are not well sealed and that do not allow air to enter or leave your house can have a noticeable effect on your heating bill. In any doorway properly sealed with weatherstripping will make a big difference. You should look for a product that is strong, secure and resilient. It should also be easy to replace, since it will be under a lot of stress from opening and closing the door.

When closing the door, you should be able to pull it in to get it latched. This indicates a pressure seal that will stop air leakage. Where possible, the top and sides of any door frame should be weatherstripped so that it makes contact with the edge of the door to provide a good seal. Even if the door doesn't weatherstrip, a heavy weatherstripping seal is best.

Weatherstripping against the face of the door should be checked often because it will have to be adjusted occasionally to match the warping of the door. It is very important to weatherstrip the threshold of the door too, as this is frequently the location of serious drafts. This can be achieved with weatherstripping attached to the threshold or to the bottom of the door. If the weatherstripping is attached directly to the top of the door, it must be very durable to withstand heavy use.

Remember to check for clearance — the door may have to be trimmed to accommodate it. Interlocking weatherstripping provides an excellent seal, but is difficult to install. Any number of other materials will provide an effective seal, but they may not last as long. If you do not have a door that is properly sealed, there is no much movement within the house structure as well as from the movement of the door. If your door has an air seal, you should take the same precautions as you would with any other work. Double glazing should be used with adequate caulking around the edges. Some pane doors are usually used only in windows in the winter, they should be thoroughly sealed with weatherstripping or duct tape. North-facing pane doors should be the best place to start if you are considering insulated blinds or shutters. Storm doors provide an extra layer of insulation from the cold and can be a valuable energy conservation measure. They are fairly inexpensive and are usually used with adequate caulking. A storm door can significantly reduce energy loss through doorways. A closed porch, garage or specially constructed entranceway can lower heat loss when doors are opened. If your home does not already have one, you should consider constructing a vestibule entranceway when home renovations are planned.

If your home does not already have one, you should consider constructing a vestibule entranceway when home renovations are planned.

Oil furnances should be checked yearly

Just like a car, or any other major mechanical device, your oil furnace needs to be checked regularly.

A knowledgeable heating professional should clean and service your furnace at least once a year to ensure safety, reliability and efficiency. A thorough cleaning and tuning operation will take one to two hours and involve the partial disassembly of your furnace and oil burner. The internal heat exchanger, flue pipe and lower chimney surfaces should be brushed and vacuumed to remove soot and debris.

Corroded or damaged flue pipes should be replaced. Moving parts such as dampers need to be lubricated and belts should be tightened. All safety controls must be cleaned and tested. The entire system, from the fire tank oil filter to the nozzle should be in perfect, cleaned, adjusted and, where necessary, parts should be replaced.

Your serviceman should use replacement nozzles certified by the Canadian Standards Association (CSA). Make sure that the oil spray pattern and oil flow, measured in gallons per hour, are compatible with the rating described on the name plate of the furnace.

The condition of the ductwork can affect fuel efficiency. Replacing old ductwork with new clear path for its return to the furnace for reheating.

The duct system should allow for adequate circulation. Registers should never be obstructed. An open or loose panel on the furnace rating will draw cool basement air into the system, and may even be a safety hazard. Warm air ducts should be insulated, especially if they pass through unheated spaces or into exterior walls. The ductwork can be taped with special duct tape to prevent air leaks, but remember to wash them first, otherwise the tape won't stick.

If you have any questions about furnace maintenance, your serviceman is a reliable source of information. Another option is the toll free HEATLINE 1 800 247 9563, 112 800 267 9563 in British Columbia where free advice is always available on any energy related topic.

Safety and efficiency of wood stoves is closely linked

The safety and efficiency of a wood burning appliance are closely linked. Incomplete combustion resulting from an inadequate air supply produces unburned gases that accumulate as creosote in chimneys. Creosote is highly flammable and creates the risk of chimney fires, which can damage the chimney structure and cause dangerous overheating of adjacent wood in the walls and roof.

The creosote problem is primarily caused by overloading wood-fired appliances or operating them on a low combustion air setting, or both, to get a long, slow fire. Smoke and creosote represent wasted energy.

A hot fire should be maintained for about 30 minutes immediately after loading the appliance. A hot fire burns completely, produces less smoke, and, therefore, less creosote.

Generally, air controls on a wood-fired appliance should be fully open until the fresh fuel is well charred. A stack thermometer on the flue pipe between the appliance and chimney will indicate how the fire is burning. It helps the wood stove operator in the same way that a speedometer helps the operator of a car.

During relatively mild weather when heating requirements are low, the use of small, well seasoned fuel loads will promote efficient combustion. A small, efficiently burning fire produces as much heat as a larger fire with an inadequate air supply. If you often have to let your fire smoulder in cold weather the stove may be too big for the heating requirements of your home.

Dry, well seasoned firewood is important. Wet fuel wastes much of the heat potential. Wood seasoned under cover for six to 12 months can contain less than half the moisture content of newly cut fuel.

If you are considering buying a wood-fired stove or furnace for the first time, installing the proper size will make for safe and efficient operation. A small appliance, used properly, is the best way to get the benefits of wood heat.

Attic vents

Good cross ventilation in your attic is very important. Ideally, ventilation openings should be located on the eave and on the peak so there is air movement from end to end and from top to bottom. It is recommended that 50 per cent of the ventilation area be continuous soffit vents and that the other 50 per cent be ridge or roof vents. Ridge vents are best where practical.

Spring up all across Canada

R-2000 Homes set a new standard

The home of the future is springing up today, all across Canada. It looks very much like any other conventional home but it's designed and built to cut heating costs by as much as 75 per cent. Called the R-2000 Home it's gradually changing the face of our building industry.

In 1980 the Government of Saskatchewan, the National Research Council and Energy Mines and Resources Canada collaborated on the construction of 16 super-energy-efficient homes. They featured

- thicker walls and ceilings to hold more than twice the usual amount of insulation
- a continuous air vapour barrier to ensure airtightness, less heat loss and reduced drafts
- controlled ventilation mechanically moving stale air out and fresh air in
- double or triple glazing windows with a minimum of 12.5 mm between the panes. Most windows were placed to catch the sun in winter

The new houses were met with great enthusiasm and the federal government announced its intention to encourage construction of more super-

A year and a half of planning and study between Energy Mines and Resources and the Canadian Home Builders Association (CHBA) produced the R-2000 Home Program, carefully tailored to the needs of homebuyers and the industry. It was clear the builders needed information and training. With a basic understanding of the principles of how to keep the heat in and fan the air out, some innovative building techniques, builders can modify design details of almost any home to meet the R-2000 Home standard of energy efficiency.

CHBA: Our members have come up with ideas we would never have predicted. Having seen the results, we and our government partners are now even more convinced of the correctness of our approach.

In addition to the earlier proven target designs, the super energy-efficient homes each R 2000 Home was:

- have a proper is modified vapour barrier to protect the building structure and prevent air leakage the house and its systems so that the industry can evaluate the performance of each house.

Some 1400 builders have attended R 2000 Home Train in years past. They have been introduced to HRF 2000, a computer program that can help them assess and improve their design. It can predict the amount of heat a house will lose. Although he waits rarely, Johnson's dealer had been a customer and had been given a discount on his appliances. High sales, low overhead, he explains,

As well as its long-established information design and consultation techniques, the range of services provide information on marketing and business development. Many buyers are looking for about £2000 a month. The idea of improving in each design is a challenge is a lot of trouble," says Henry Owen. Our production is what is good for the industry — and wants to improve the quality of the homebuyers' life.

Firewood tips

If you are going to buy firewood for use this winter, here are some tips that will help you get the most for your money.

Early spring is the best time to get next winter's firewood. It will have time to dry properly and it is the offseason for firewood dealers, so prices may be lower.

When purchasing wood make sure you know what you are getting. The common cord measurement is 1.2 m x 1.2 m x 2.4 m, although other units, such as stove cords, face cords or third cords, are used. When comparing prices, make sure they are based on the same type and quantity of wood.

The density and heat source per cord varies greatly among tree species. The denser hardwoods like maple, oak and ash are usually more expensive than the lighter softwoods. Although the hardwoods provide more heat from a given volume of fuel, the lower priced softwoods can often provide cheaper heat.

Basement moisture

Damp spots, crumbling and cracked mortar or a white powdery deposit on foundation walls (efflorescence) are signs of moisture and water seepage. If you have these problems in your basement, the following steps should be taken to stop moisture penetration.

The best way to stop moisture is to install a system of drainage pipe in the outside the foundation footings. Backfilling with coarse gravel allows any water movement.

Basement windows should be well sealed and any cracks in the walls should be repaired. Windows with should contain crushed stone to allow effective drainage.

The ground should slope away from the house and eave troughs should be installed to collect water from the roof and direct it away from the house.

If you plan to insulate your basement, deal with moisture problems first. Sealing insulation is of no value.

Les Schmidt from Mowhawk examines a propane converter in a vehicle.

Propane

Fuel of future

With the high price of gas more and more people are converting.

Converting to propane that is. High gasoline costs are making the idea of propane power more inviting to the average car owner.

In Draxton Valley, Mowhawk and ICG both specialize in propane.

A lot are converting, especially fleet vehicles," according to Les Schmidt, assistant manager at Mowhawk.

Once the system is paid off, each time you go to the pump you're saving," Schmidt adds.

Alex Sadi, manager of ICG, says the number of propane powered vehicles is "growing and growing all the time."

The cost of converting a vehicle to propane is quickly returned to the consumer according to both Sadi and Schmidt.

Sadi says they will analyze vehicles and give the customer data on how well their cars are performing.

Once they see it on paper what they go to save," they will convert says Sadi.

He adds that any vehicle can be converted to propane.

Schmidt pointed out some of the favorable aspects of having a propane powered vehicle.

One is the big item, but Schmidt added that propane "burns cleaner" than fuel making it better for the vehicle, which will require less oil changes.

In addition, propane is safer than gas. If a propane tank springs a leak the automatic lock system will shut it off, according to Schmidt.

A propane tank also has about 20 times the impact resistance of a gas or diesel tank, Schmidt pointed out.

Converting to propane is a relatively easy process that can take a day. Sadi says ICG will be installing their own conversion centre in October and will be able to "specialize in tune-ups and propane conversions."

The system will also feature a 24 hour Kard lock system so customers can get propane anytime.

Both Schmidt and Sadi say propane is becoming a popular choice as the fuel of the future.

Checklist for proper maintenance practises

Every homeowner knows that regular service and maintenance of heating equipment is the key to economy and safety.

What is a very important fact is that the chimney is a critical component, whether you heat with oil, natural gas or wood.

Take a look at the following checklist. If your chimney or your maintenance practices do not match this profile, seek advice from a qualified professional.

All chimneys must be installed with safe clearances to combustible building components and materials.

Tips on insulating your house

The cost of insulating your home can be decreased substantially by doing the work yourself.

Different installation methods apply for each type of insulation and each area of the home, and there are a few tips and rules of thumb that should be followed by homeowners doing any type of insulating work.

Insulation wraps the house in a layer that slows the rate of heat loss. Insulation traps pockets of air. This air reduces heat loss by conduction and sure air cannot circulate, heat loss by convection is minimized. It also blocks heat radiation. An air vapor barrier is used to ensure that humidity from the house does not enter the building structure and cause damage.

The insulating material must be carefully chosen and installed so that it completely blankets the available space, otherwise heat will escape through the holes. If the material is compressed it will also be less effective. Bear in mind that the cold side of insulation needs to be ventilated to allow moisture to escape and prevent damage to the insulation and surrounding structures. There are four types of insulation: batt or blankets, loose fill, rigid or semi rigid foams.

All insulation materials are potentially hazardous and must be handled with care. Read the product instructions closely. There are a number of safety precautions you should follow when working with any type of insulation.

• Never smoke near insulation
• Handle equipment carefully. Sprayers, blowers and foamers require specific instructions and practices.

• Wear long sleeves with tight cuffs, loose, thick clothing and gloves. Insulation materials can easily irritate the skin.

• Goggles should be worn if there is a possibility of insulation dust coming in contact with the eyes.

• A nontoxic particle mask or breathing filter should be worn.

• Hard hats are necessary to prevent head injury, and to protect eyes and hair from insulation particles.

• Vacuum fibres or dust if possible. If not, wet the area before sweeping to prevent particles from becoming airborne.

Check and repair any roof leaks before adding insulation to the attic. Lay boards over the tops of joists or lower truss members to form a walkway. Good light is essential, but avoid using an open bulb as it can ignite some types of insulation and it is easily damaged. Locate all electrical wiring and then avoid unnecessary contact with it. If it doesn't look safe it should be inspected.

Avoid heat stress. If it is a really hot day stay out of the attic completely.

If you find there are nails protruding from the floor, wear safety boots, otherwise shoes with good traction are fine.

No matter how tight the house, some moisture will find its way into insulated areas. Adequate venting is essential to allow its escape to the outside.

The basement can be insulated on either the inside or the outside. When working inside, keep yourself and materials away from the flue pipe of the furnace, or any other source of heat. Watch out for knob and tube wiring that is in poor condition (this is more likely to be a problem in an older house). And before you begin, be sure to caulk any cracks between the foundation and sill.

If you're working outside, it is going to require a lot of digging before the job really begins, so a lot of time for this step. If any services such as gas, telephone or cable enter your home underground, be sure to find out where before you start digging. Special care should be taken to prevent damage to exterior drainage pipes or tiles. If you don't have these, this is a good time to install adequate drainage and waterproof exterior base

• For safety and long life the chimney should be properly sized. Ideally, it should be the same size as the flue pipe that connects it to the heating appliance.

• Multiple connections to the same chimney can be dangerous. Never connect two or more heating appliances to a single chimney without an inspection by the appropriate authority in your area.

• A chimney located inside a house will perform better and require less maintenance than one located outside.

• Adequate clearance (contact your local building inspector) from the roof and nearby obstructions is essential to good performance, as air turbulence creates uneven chimney draft.

• Regular inspections are a must, no matter what fuel you use. You should check for loose mortar between the bricks, rust, sulphur or creosote stains on the chimney surface, or loose bricks at the bottom of the chimney. Ensure that the support brackets (on a masonry chimney), the sparks screen and the chimney flashing on the roof are in good condition and operating properly. Chimneys should be cleaned when creosote builds up to 6 mm.

Chimneys serving oil or gas appliances should be checked once a year or more often if convenient. Chimneys venting wood-burning appliances need even closer attention, especially in the spring and fall when roof or scupperling fires can accelerate dangerous creosote buildup on a chimney's inner surface.

Remember that a chimney is an important part of any heating system. The failure of a poorly maintained chimney can have severe consequences for you and your home.

most expensive part of the house to insulate, but if you decide to do the work yourself, be sure to follow the safety precautions listed above. In most cases, the advice or services of a professional will be required.

William Russ knew Jody Varner was the role for him

By Lynn Hoogenboom

William Russ

Working with big-name stars is nothing new for William Russ, who plays Jody Varner in "The Long Hot Summer," which airs Sunday Oct. 5, and Monday Oct. 7 on NBC.

It's his sophomore year, I stumbled into a show that some friends were in and that was it. I took the magnifying glass and made me think I could be in the Olympics and used it in acting.

After college he studied acting at the Neighborhood Playhouse in New York City, then I got on the street, knocked on doors. I drove a cab, worked in restaurants, and did all the things actors do while we're maintaining that's when you find out whether you really want to do it.

Russ' initial break was the off-Broadway play "Foucault" (I had got me an agent and got me out of the restaurant business). I then landed a role on the daytime soap, "Another World" (as But McGowan) and did five plays, including "The Basic Training of Fabio Hummel," with Al Pacino while he was appearing on "Another World."

He hasn't yet reached the point where he can be picky about the parts he takes, but he never had any doubts about playing Jody. "I wanted to do this part. You say to yourself, 'This part is mine. I was lucky they left the same way'."

"I've done that before, and I like it a lot," says Russ. "I've worked with Burt Lancaster, Rod Taylor, George Burns, Al Pacino. I've been really lucky."

What is unique about "Long Hot Summer" is the role, which Russ describes as "my best part in years."

"I'm there all the time and I'm sort of a catalyst. There are a lot of parts like that in the theater, but not many on television. Everything I've learned in the past years, I used here."

He describes the production as a real ensemble effort. "I loved working with Jason Robards. If we had royalty, he would be it. Don Johnson and I had worked together in Miami. And Jody and I worked together in the theater. And Jody and
